The Story of the White Buffalo

One summer a long time ago, the seven sacred council fires of the Lakota Sioux came together and camped. The people were starving for there was no game. Two young men went out to hunt. Along the way, the two men met a beautiful young woman dressed in white who floated as she walked. One man had desires for the woman and was turned into a pile of bones. The woman spoke to the second young man and said, "Return to your people and tell them I am coming." This holy woman brought a wrapped bundle to the people. She unwrapped the bundle, giving the people a sacred pipe and teaching them how to use it to pray. Before she left, she told the people she would return. The White Buffalo Woman began walking West into the sunset. She rolled over four times: the fourth time she became a female white buffalo calf.

Some say the birth of the white buffalo calf is a sign that soon, all the nations of the world will come together in peace.

Each of my pieces is carefully handcrafted. I use a variety of materials from all over the world including pearls, fossils, semi-precious stones, coral, glass and crystal. It is my sincere hope that you will enjoy your White Buffalo treasure for years to come.

Artist Bio

I have been involved in art and creation all my life including music, drama, dance, painting and writing. I have been making jewelry off and on since I was a child. I am completely self-taught and have been designing and creating jewelry as a business since 1995. Initially, I sold my jewelry mainly at festivals and home shows. I spent 7 years making Victorian-inspired jewelry for Dickens on the Strand in Galveston under the name "Miss Havisham's Attic". From 1997-2003 I sold my jewelry almost exclusively at October Gallery in the Heights, where many of my customers became avid collectors of my pieces. I now sell my pieces exclusively at Lucia's Garden, where I've been since 2003.

I get my inspirations from several areas including art, pop culture and nature. My focus is to make quality pieces of lasting value and relevance.
